

11 Hottest Spots in Miami Now

Miami will forever be the land of sugar-sand beaches and rum-soaked dance parties. But rotating fashion exhibits, a $65 five-course tasting menu, and origami workshops? These brand-spanking-new hot spots demand you start packing right now. Kate Donnelly reveals 11 good reasons to visit the Magic City today.

Fashion Project

On the third floor of the high-end retail outpost Bal Harbour, the new cultural hot spot known as Fashion Project functions as an installation space and art gallery. Curated by London-based Judith Clark (whose résumé includes Fondation Louis Vuitton), the rotating exhibits pay homage to — what else? — fashion. You'll see a 1913 Ballets Russes costume, a futuristic late-'90s remote-control dress by fashion designer Hussein Chalayan, and pieces by such luminaries as Miuccia Prada and Alexander McQueen.
