Fashion Project, an experimental space in Bal Harbour Shops dedicated to fashion and the broader culture surrounding its design, production, dissemination, and consumption, kicks off its first Miami film festival, Dressing Down the Movies: Nat Chediak on Fashion, on August 15. The six week festival which is free, features 24 classic films that span nearly seven decades, from 1919 through 1994. Films are at 2:30pm and 7pm Monday through Saturday and 3pm Sunday. Check out the schedule below:

Beginning with Pandora's Box from 1929, featuring Louise Brooks with her iconic bob, dressed in a Jean Patou tank dress, to Robert Altman's entertaining and vitriolic Ready to Wear from 1994, the films present pivotal fashion moments, trends, designers, and some of our favorite fashion emissaries. There's Audrey Hepburn in Funny Face from 1957, with her Givenchy-designed Paris wardrobe; the narrow lapels and cuffless trousers donned by the Rat Pack in Ocean's 11 in 1960, and of course Jane Fonda in futuristic armor by Paco Rabanne in Barbarella, the 1968 cult classic.

The festival is curated by Nat Chediak and offered in partnership with Coral Gables Art Cinema. Film screenings take place in Fashion Project's one-thousand-square-foot space on the third floor of Bal Harbour Shops. For the film festival, the space is being converted from an exhibition space into a chic, living room/screening room designed specifically for the festival by noted architect and designer Tui Pranich of Tui Lifestyle. A selection of books on film and fashion is featured at neighboring Books & Books Bal Harbour Shops.

Seating at the films is limited and will be on a first-come, first-served basis. Contact Fashion Project with questions or for further information: info@fashionprojectbhs.com or 786.245.2200. Here's the schedule in all its glory:
